Dear Sir,

Re: Murton vs. Murton

Please be advised that the current access arrangements are no longer satisfactory. My client has advised that the children are "fearful" in your presence and are afraid to go with you.

I have also been given a detailed account of the altercation that occurred yesterday when you attended at my client's home to pick up the children. By all accounts, you were irrational and abusive. I understand there were a number of witnesses in the neighbourhood who observed your conduct.

My client is of the view that future visits should be "supervised", as the children have been most upset by your behaviour and as a result are afraid to go with you. The current arrangement obviously is not in the best interests of the children.

If this is not satisfactory, please have your solicitor contact me on or before April 8, 1994.

Yours very truly,

POLAK, MCKAY & HAWKSHAW
